Transformative Justice Community Grants

CFSC's Transformative Justice community grants support projects that are consistent with CFSC's mandate and Quaker principles in both its goals and processes. CFSC funds projects with small grants annually (most projects funded are under $500, with the maximum $1,000).

CFSC Community Grant guidelines are as follows:

1. The project must:
 - support CFSC's mandate to actively prevent harm, repair harm and move beyond harm in relation to the justice system through means that are healing for all concerned and for society as a whole;
 - be consistent with Quaker values in both its goals and process
2. Stakeholders involved in the project have a voice regardless of political, religious, national or racial factors.
3. Rather than providing sustained core funding to established organizations, preference will be given to:
 - projects that others will not grant
 - seed money for new projects/initiatives
 - one-off kinds of projects
4. CFSC will also consider if there is a Friend (Quaker)/Monthly Meeting (Quaker Church) close to, or involved in, the project and geographic location of the project.

Applications will be accepted throughout the year.
